

5 Reasons for Traveling to Manali in Winters

Manali and Shimla are two of the most popular tourist destinations in India with thousands visiting every year. In the last few years, the people visiting Manali in winters are not just limited to honeymooners, but to plenty of people from different walks of life who prefer visiting Manali in winters. There are many reasons for it. Let's have a look at 5 such reasons.

1

Chance to play in the snow and make snowmen

Winters in Manali means snow, snow, and snow, especially when going towards Rohtang Pass snow points. This means you can dive, slide, throw snowballs at each other, and make those snowmen. Manali is the most popular and probable place to find snow or snowfall near Delhi. The main places to spot snow would be Gulaba, Marhi, and Rohtang Pass too, if still open.

Chance to enjoy the snow activities

When visiting Manali in winters, you can enjoy all type of snow activities like snow tubing, snow scooter rides, snow sledding, skiing, zorbing in snow, etc. Snow points near Manali at Gulaba and Marhi flourish with local vendors offering these activities for the tourists. Though touristy and a little expensive, it is a lot of fun when with family, especially for the kids.

Less tourist rush & lesser overall crowdedness

In summers, you will witness herds of people flocking the narrow roads, honking, and traffic everywhere. However, when you will visit Manali(except for Christmas and New Year's Eve) in winters, you will find there are much fewer tourists which gives you space and quaintness you are looking to experience.

Great deals on hotels & other stay Options

All stay options or hotels in Manali offer good discounts and deals in winter, which start around mid-November and ends by the end of March. These discounts are not limited to private hotels but tourist department run HPTDC also offers 40% discounts on their Log huts / Orchards huts and Hadimba Cottages.

Cheaper taxi and commute rates

You can also expect good discounts on local taxis and local commute options as well in Manali in the winter due to the low demand. The best option is to connect with local drivers a list of whom can be found on the DevilOnWheels blog.
